

The Tiger king

1. Who is the Tiger King? Why does he get that name?

Answer:

The Tiger King is the Maharaja of Pratibandapuram. He gets this name because he is obsessed with killing tigers and vows to kill one hundred tigers to disprove the astrologers' prediction about his death.

2. What did the chief astrologer predict about the Tiger King?

Answer:

The chief astrologer predicted that the Tiger King would meet his death because of a tiger, and this prophecy would come true when he tried to kill the hundredth tiger.

3. How did the Tiger King celebrate the killing of the hundredth tiger?

Answer:

The Tiger King celebrated the killing of the hundredth tiger by ordering a grand celebration, giving rewards to his officers, and feeling relieved that he had escaped the astrologer's prophecy.

4. What explanation was given by the chief astrologer to the query of the little Tiger King?

Answer:

The chief astrologer explained that while all living beings must die someday, the Tiger King's death would be caused specifically by a tiger.

5. What did the Maharaja decide to do when he remembered the astrologer's prediction?

Answer:

When the Maharaja remembered the astrologer's prediction, he decided to kill all the tigers in his kingdom to prevent his foretold death.

6. How did the hundredth tiger take its revenge on the Tiger King?

Answer:

The hundredth tiger took its revenge indirectly when a wooden toy tiger caused an infection in the Tiger King's hand, which later led to his death.

7. What did astrologers foretell when the Tiger King was born?

Answer:

The astrologers foretold that the newly born prince would grow up to become a powerful ruler but would meet his death because of a tiger.

8. Why does the Tiger King get his name?

Answer:

The Maharaja is called the Tiger King because of his relentless pursuit and killing of tigers in order to defeat the astrologers' prophecy.

7 mark ans

1. Character sketch of the Tiger King

Answer:

The Tiger King, the Maharaja of Pratibandapuram, is the central character of Kalki's satirical story The Tiger King. From birth, he is portrayed as extraordinary, as he speaks like an adult and questions the astrologers' prediction about his death. This early incident highlights his arrogance and belief in his own power.

As a ruler, the Tiger King is autocratic, selfish, and ruthless. Obsessed with disproving the astrologers' prophecy that he would be killed by a tiger, he vows to kill one hundred tigers. In pursuit of this goal, he shows no regard for wildlife, ethics, or the suffering of others. He even marries for political convenience to gain access to more tigers, revealing his manipulative and calculating nature.

The Tiger King is also short-sighted and egoistic. He believes that brute force and authority can overpower destiny. His pride blinds him to reason, and he misuses his royal power to satisfy his obsession. At the same time, the author uses him as a symbol of tyrannical rulers who exploit nature and people.

In the end, the Tiger King's tragic death exposes his foolishness and the irony of his actions. Thus, the Tiger King is presented as a proud, cruel, and arrogant ruler whose obsession leads to his downfall.

2. Describe the ironical ending of the story The Tiger King

Answer:

The ending of The Tiger King is deeply ironical and reinforces the central theme of the story. Throughout his life, the Tiger King is obsessed with the astrologers' prediction that he would be killed by a tiger. To prevent this, he kills ninety-nine tigers and believes that killing the hundredth tiger has freed him from danger.

Ironically, the hundredth tiger does not die from his bullet but merely faints. However, the Tiger King assumes it to be dead and celebrates his victory. Later, he buys a wooden toy tiger for his son. A splinter from the poorly carved toy pierces his hand, causing an infection.

Despite treatment by doctors, the infection spreads and ultimately leads to the Tiger King's death. Thus, the astrologers' prediction comes true in an unexpected way — the Tiger King is killed not by a real tiger, but by a wooden toy tiger.

The irony lies in the fact that despite his power, intelligence, and cruelty, the Tiger King cannot escape fate. The ending highlights the futility of human pride and mocks the belief that destiny can be controlled through force.